Thus the disfranchise of 650 bales uplands at 34@35c. Gold ment effected under the first Franchise Act, passed June 5, 1865, was clearly unconstitutional, and could have been set aside at any time by an appeal to the courts. But suppose we are mistaken as to the scope of the power conferred on the Legis-lature. Suppose the Legislature did have the unlimited power they claim. Suppose that the first Franchise Act was precisely shadowed forth in the 9th section of the schedule. What then? On the 5th of June, 1865, it did pass an act entitled "An Act to limit the Elective Franchise." By the passage of this act, the Legislature executed the power delegated to it. It exhausted the grant of power conferred upon it, and it had no right to act again on the subject without a new grant from the people. Under that law, the people throughout the State registered the governments of Prussis and Italy are as- and became qualified voters.
